

The Story of Pandora

Storyteller	The story of Pandora has been handed down from one generation to the next, and is many thousands of years old. It is one of the best-known Greek myths, probably because it involves some very powerful people and some extremely dramatic events. Let me introduce some of these characters. First of all, I'd like to introduce Prometheus (pronounced Prom-ee-thee-uss) and ask him to tell you a little about himself.
Prometheus	I am the Titan Prometheus. A Titan is another word for giant. The word Titanic comes from my name, and describes anything of great and powerful size, like me! I am the creator of mankind. I made the first humans from clay and water. You will probably also be interested to know that I come from pre-Christian times. I have a rather serious problem looming over me. For some reason, Zeus, (pron. Zoose) that stormy king of the gods, is very angry with me, probably because he has suddenly realised that he isn't as smart as the lovely little humans I've created. In fact, I can safely say that Zeus constantly goes out of his way to be unkind to my humans, whereas I think of them as friendly and rather cute little pets. (turns away from audience and 'freezes')